OFFICE OF THE DEAN

TEL. NO. 812-337-331

Letter of Transmittal

President John W. Ryan
Indiana University
Bloomington, Indiana

Dear President Ryan:

Circumstances dictate that the annual report for the year 1975-76 of the Indiana University School of Law - Bloomington be submitted by an Acting Dean. Former Dean Boshkoff announced his resignation, to take effect the following December, in the spring of 1975; Acting Dean Nolan assumed office in January of 1976 and served until August of that year; I was appointed Acting Dean as of August 30th, 1976. Although the School had no permanent dean for the period of this report, it had a mission.

Mission

As is characteristic of all flourishing institutions, the School's mission grows out of its past, sustained by its tradition. Founded in 1842, the first state university law school in the mid-west, this School is abidingly dedicated to providing State and Nation with lawyers educated to the highest professional standards. To this end it has attracted a selected student body, taught by a faculty committed to excellence in teaching and respected by their peers for scholarly research. School and faculty have through the years cooperated with bench and bar, executive and legislative government, in projects of mutual interest.

The accomplishment of the School's mission can be measured by the achievement of its graduates. They constitute a substantial segment of the practicing bar of every county in the State. They have served in legal and executive posts in federal agencies and corporate organizations. They have distinguished themselves in the federal judiciary and on the bench of this State and of others. Governors and state legislators, congressmen and senators, have been drawn from the School's alumni. They have been leaders of professional associations on state and national levels.

Of course the history of the School has not been an even, orderly movement towards a perceived goal by means of a fixed route. In a recent letter to the School's alumni, there appeared the following passage:

. . . . [l]egal education at this School, perhaps at all good schools, takes on the distinctive attribute of law itself--a proper balance between stability and change, tradition and innovation. The substantive law and analytical skills are still taught in the first years by means of those familiar and essential courses, Torts, Contracts, Property; Civil, Criminal and Administrative Procedure, Evidence, Conflict of Laws are the vehicles for training in the adjectival skills indispensable to the profession; courses in Constitutional Law, Tax, Labor Law, and others of a similar nature, provide grounding in public law and regulatory agencies. Moreover, a deeper understanding of contemporary issues, such as environmental pollution, consumerism, the effectiveness of the criminal law and the penal system, is achieved because they are studied in the context of a traditional curriculum. And all law schools, no less this one, evolve programs for teaching those skills--trial practice, counseling, negotiating, drafting--not easily accommodated in the conventional curriculum. Legal education, then, as must all viable institutions, respects the past, engages the present, and is concerned about the future.

In this year, as in every year, the students made their unique contribution to the pattern of the School's development. The inspection report to the Council on Legal Education of the American Bar Association stated that the students are "very well qualified. Their credentials compare favorably with the students enrolled in the best law schools in the country." In a period of tight job opportunities, 86 percent of the graduating students were placed in legal positions throughout the country by the January following their graduation. Twelve students were appointed to prestigious clerkships with federal or state judges. The Moot Court Team won a tri-state competition. The fifty-first edition of the Indiana Law Journal and the third edition of Iustitia were produced by the student editors.

The faculty continued to be productive. For the purposes of this summary, only a few items will be mentioned. The faculty created new courses--Art, the Artist and the Law offered in the Fine Arts Department, and Copyright and Unfair Competition, and a Clinic in Federal Courts offered at the Law School. A substantial number of the faculty participated in the annual survey of Indiana law. Articles by the faculty appeared in distinguished scholarly journals, some of them being the Cambridge Law Journal, the Yale Law Journal, the Ecology Law Quarterly, and the Urban Law Annual. Faculty members read papers, appeared on panels, gave lectures, and made speeches before a variety of organizations and institutions: the Seventh Federal Circuit; the American Bar Association; the Association of American Law Schools; United States Civil Service Commission; the University of Washington School of Medicine; and the American Society for Legal History. Faculty members made reports to, testified before and advised the: Indiana House and Senate Committees; United States House and Senate; Federal Trade Commission; United States Environmental Protection Agency; and the United States General Accounting Office.

A number of significant honors were accorded the alumni during 1975-76. Harry Gonso was elected to the Board of Trustees; Phil McNaghy, Jr., was appointed to the federal bench; Shirley Abrahamson was named to the Wisconsin Supreme Court; Robert Aders was sworn in as Under Secretary of Labor; Gene Brooks was appointed to the faculty of the Federal Judiciary Center; David Evans was named Outstanding Young Alumnus by the Senior Class Council.

In its report of November 6, 1975, the Committee of Special Consultants appointed to advise you on the utilization of the University's resources for legal education, recommended the continuing existence of this School at its present location and with the present administrative organization and responsibility. This recommendation acknowledges the contribution the School has made over the years, through its teaching, scholarship and service, to the legal life of the State and the Nation.

Problems and Plans

On November 16-18, 1975 a reinspection team visited this School for the purpose of preparing a report for the Council of the Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar. After the report was considered by the Council, it resolved that:

Indiana University School of Law - Bloomington be found in full compliance with the Standards of the American Bar Association.

Similarly, the Executive Committee of the Association of American Law Schools, after considering the same report, resolved:

The Indiana University School of Law -
Bloomington, is found to provide its students with an opportunity to obtain a good legal education. The School has the potential to assume a place among the best state law schools in the country.

However, both the Accreditation Committee of the A. B. A. and the Executive Committee of the A. A. L. S. expressed certain "concerns" and made recommendations for improvements. Those concerns that were important and tangible were already known to the School. They involve, largely, space and budgetary needs. The library's book budget is inadequate; the student seating in the library does not meet relevant standards; faculty salary structure is not adequate to attract outstanding new additions; a more favorable student-faculty ratio in the first year and selected upper-class courses cannot be achieved at current faculty size; a more integrated curriculum for second and third year students needs to be developed.

In a letter to the Executive Director of the Association of American Law Schools, Vice-President O'Neil outlined the steps already taken and others planned in response to these recommendations. The steps include an increase in the library book budget; conversion of a student lounge into a reading room; the addition of one faculty member this year and two more in 1977-78 and 1978-79; continuing the effort begun two years ago to augment faculty salaries. In addition, the faculty plans to study the desirability of affording students an opportunity to take a cluster of interrelated courses to serve their particular interests. And the faculty continues to develop a symbiotic relationship with bench and bar.

In brief, last year witnessed both continuity and change-- a renewed commitment to teaching, scholarship, and service, and appropriate responses to emerging problems. For details and specifics I respectfully refer you to the attached report.

Sincerely yours,

Harry Pratter
Acting Dean

ANNUAL REPORT

SCHOOL OF LAW
INDIANA UNIVERSITY
BLOOMINGTON

EVENTS

- A) This year the Addison C. Harris Memorial Lectures were delivered by Owen M. Fiss, professor at Yale Law School, who lectured on "The Civil Rights Injunction" on April 5 and 6. A graduate of Dartmouth College, the University of Oxford and the Harvard Law School, Professor Fiss clerked for (then) Judge Thurgood Marshall of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals and for Justice William Brennan of the United States Supreme Court. He served as Special Assistant to the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice and was Acting Director of the Office of Planning Coordination. He was a professor at the University of Chicago Law School and visited at Stanford Law School. A recognized scholar in the field of constitutional perspectives on racial discrimination in employment and education, Professor Fiss is the author of Injunctions and numerous articles.

As always, invitations to attend the lectures were sent to all members of the Indiana Bar, the other law schools in the state, and our students and faculty. A coffee hour after each lecture enabled the students and faculty to exchange ideas and questions with Professor Fiss.

- B) The Indiana Supreme Court, for the 5th consecutive year, visited the law school to hear arguments in an actual case. The Court arranged for opposing counsel to present their arguments before the faculty and student body. This year's case involved a tort action and interpretation of whether failure to file notice of the claim within the county where an accident occurred barred a suit.
- C) The law school co-sponsored a Seminar and Workshop in Teaching Legal Drafting with the American Bar Association. Professor F. Reed Dickerson chaired the seminar to which 28 law schools from this country, Canada and England sent representatives.
- D) The School, with the Indiana Continuing Legal Education Forum (ICLEF) and the Probate, Trust and Real Property Section of the Indiana State Bar Association, co-sponsored the Third Annual Institute in Estate Planning. Over 50 practitioners attended the three-day program. Panelists were: Rene Wormser of the New York firm of Wormser, Kiely, Alessandrini, Mahoney and McCann; James Thornburg and John Carey of the South Bend firm of Thornburg, McGill, Deahl, Harman, Carey and Murray; William Casey, of Counsel, Rogers and Wells and former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Philip Heckerling, Professor, University of Miami School of Law; David Link, Dean, Notre Dame Law School and T. Bryan Underwood, Associate Dean at this law school. Registrants for the Institute received continuing legal education credit from ICLEF.

- E) P-A-C-E (Public Action in Correctional Effort) sponsored a forum at the law school on "Sentencing Alternatives; How Best to Protect the Public Against Criminal Acts While Dealing Fairly with Offenders." Professor F. Thomas Schornhorst was one of the panelists.
- F) The law school hosted a Seminar on Alternative Legal Careers on April 3. The Seminar was organized by the Placement Office and a group of interested students. Stephen Meyers of a Los Angeles Legal Clinic and Lou Sirico, a Ralph Nader organizer from the Washington, D. C. PIRG were the principle speakers. In addition there were numerous workshops in civil rights, family law, law collectives, solo practice, legal services and public interest law. Students from this and other law schools attended to learn about the various ways in which legal skills can be used.
- G) Professor Greenebaum conducted a four day "Follow up Course" for alumni who had taken his course in Roles and Relations in the Practice of Law when they were students here. The seminar was designed to elicit information useful in offering the course in the future and in creating research methods of evaluating it.

PROGRAM DEVELOPMENTS

- A) The law school and the College of Arts and Sciences again offered a course for honors undergraduates, H400. Professor Edward Sherman of this school and Professor Samuel Loescher of the Economics Department offered a course entitled "Interdepartmental Colloquium on Public Interest Advocacy," which met in the law school.
- B) Professor Douglass Boshkoff taught a new course entitled, "Art, the Artist and the Law," which was offered in the Fine Arts Department. The course, open to graduate students across the campus, covered legal problems of the visual arts, including censorship, copyright, government support through subsidy, taxation, and consumer protection.
- C) B642, Appellate Advocacy, designed by Professor Maurice Holland, was offered again. This course is run in conjunction with the new Moot Court program; students in the course may become board members of the Moot Court. This year the school entered two teams in the Tri-State Moot Court competition in Cincinnati; one team won first place, and one student was selected as best oralist.
- D) Two new courses were offered during the academic year and one that had not been offered for several years was taught during the summer. Professor Holland created a new course, B662 Copyright and Unfair Competition, which covers the legal protection of various forms of literary, artistic and intellectual property.

Professor Edward Sherman offered a clinic in Federal Courts. Four students were selected to participate in the clinic in the court of Judge Steckler of the Southern District of Indiana sitting in Indianapolis. They worked closely with his clerks and then prepared a paper for Professor Sherman. The clinic will be expanded in 1976-77 to place clerks with Judge Dillin as well. The work of the courts exposed the students to many aspects of federal practice.

Judge William Garrard of the Indiana Court of Appeals offered a Seminar in the Judicial Process during the summer session. The seminar had been offered in the past, but never with an appellate court judge as teacher. It covered the role of and problems faced by appellate courts in the judicial system.

- E) Professor Nicholas L. White combined two courses, Wills (2 cr.) and Trusts (3 cr.) into one 4-hour course in order to allow all students to meet the Property credit requirements for admission to practice in Indiana imposed by Indiana Supreme Court Rule 13.

PROMOTIONS & LEAVES, NEW FACULTY, PRODUCTIVITY

Three faculty members received promotions in the 1975-76 academic year, effective at the beginning of the 1976-77 year. Morris Arnold and Edwin Greenebaum were promoted from associate to full professors; Maurice Holland was promoted to associate professor.

Julius Getman was on leave as visiting professor at Stanford Law School and Henry Richardson was visiting associate professor at Northwestern School of Law. Robert Rabin of Syracuse University School of Law visited here in the fall semester and taught two courses in Labor Law.

Arthur F. Fergenson was hired to begin teaching in the fall of 1976. Professor Fergenson received the J. D. degree from Yale in 1972 and was most recently associated with the Washington, D. C. firm of Covington and Burling.

Robert M. O'Neil joined the faculty as professor, in addition to his duties as Vice-President of the Bloomington campus. He offered a new seminar in labor relations during the spring semester.

Several visiting faculty taught in the summer session. Phyllida Parsloe of the University of Aberdeen and Gareth Jones of the Cambridge University taught in the second 5 week session. Earl F. Murphy of Ohio State, Gerald Bepko of the School of Law at Indianapolis and John Dawson of Boston University taught in the 5 week and 8 week sessions. In addition Robert Milroy of the I. U. School of Business taught in the 2 1/2 week session and Judge William Garrard taught a seminar in the 5 week session.

Below is a listing of faculty publications, lectures, papers, and public service activities.

OUTSTANDING STUDENTS

Twelve 1976 School of Law graduates will begin their legal careers as law clerks in the federal and state courts. Richard Bierly and Julia Smock will clerk for Judge Phil McNagny, and James Fenton will clerk for Judge Jesse Eschbach, both in the Northern District of Indiana. Eric Brown will clerk for Judge S. Hugh Dillin, and Fred Folz for Judge Cale Holder, both in the Southern District of Indiana. Richard Fanyo will clerk for Judge Fred M. Winner in Denver, Colorado.

Clerking in the Indiana Court of Appeals are Karen Bullington, Susan Edlavitch, James Gillespie, and Barbara Lehman. Thomas Fox will clerk for Justice Dixon Prentice of the Indiana Supreme Court and Christina McKee for Judge Alfred Moellering of the Allen County Superior Court.

Sixteen members of the 1976 graduating class were named to Order of the Coif: Richard Bierly, Gary Birnbaum, Eric Brown, David Carden, James Fenton, James Gillespie, Charles Greer, David Hutchinson, Donald Lundberg, Stephen Pennell, James Peterson, John Purcell, Alex Rue, Larry Stroble, N. Michael Suttle, and Michael Wills. Four of those students are, as noted above, clerking for judges. Three have joined large out of state law firms, in Chicago, Atlanta and Phoenix. Four have joined large Indiana firms. One of these graduates is working with a legal services organization, two have joined federal agencies, and one has joined the faculty at Wayne State law school.

Thomas Grier received the Sam J. Ervin Fellowship. Senator Ervin presented the award to Mr. Grier at the law school and spoke to students after the presentation. The award was donated by the I. U. Press, from proceeds of the sale of Just a Country Lawyer.

ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENTS

Twenty-five alumni have been newly appointed as county court judges. In addition several alumni have received significant honors. They include:
